

Express Industry - Moving in Top Gear

Express industry is all slated to maintain a robust growth space in the future.

However, it's overall business profile is likely to change with cargo segment outpacing the growth in courier business in next five years.

"Pace", has always been believed to be the "essence of express industry." But if their performance is analysed in the Indian context, they seem to be maintaining pace not only in the terms of deliverables, but on a parameter which is more crucial for them. And that is their own growth. A recent study conducted by noted credit rating agency Credit Analysis and Research (Care) clearly reveals that express cargo industry is on a roll and has built up substantial strength in past one decade. More importantly, report involves in some sort of crystal gazing and predicts exponential growth for the sector in the coming years but then along with this high ride, some fundamentals of the industry may get fine tuned to a considerable extent. And then there are caveats on some possible hurdles that the industry may have to grapple, almost inevitably.
